Local-based computer firm announces expansion plans

There may be 400 jobs in the computer field created in Provo during the next four years, and city officials say they couldn't be happier.

Novell Data Systems Inc., a Provo-based firm with outlets in California and other parts of the world, announced Tuesday at Utah Technical College they plan to build a 90,000 square-foot expansion near the Timpanogos Golf Course.

"We want to confirm our commitment to locate in the East Bay Center of Provo," said Raymond Noorda, president of the Novell Corporation. "In the future our growth will be considerable in magnitude."

Novell is a leading networking software business that now employs 200 people in Utah. When the project is completed, Novell will have 600 to 700 employees in Provo.

The company manufactures software for 25 major hardware systems including IBM and Texas Instruments. "We expect the substance of the Novell corporation — the company's hub — to be here in Utah Valley," said Noorda.

Last year revenues exceeded $11 million, according to company officials. Expected revenues after the expansion have not been announced.

"We've been working for this expansion for over a year," said Provo Mayor James Ferguson. "We welcome the new plans and hope that the entire valley will benefit."

"It will make a significant difference in county economics further down the road," he said.

Utah Governor Norman H. Baugher arrived after the meeting had been adjourned and jokingly said, "We're going to construct the buildings, and we'll have the meetings later."

Ferguson said Provo has been working to improve the East Bay area recently. "The quality of Novell and that of the area go together very well," he said.

The expansion will cost Novell $4.5 million to $5 million, said Noorda. "We expect a lot of growth over the next few years," he said.

Reagan unveils study of tax overhaul plan

ATHENS, Tenn. (AP) — President Reagan unveiled a new study of his tax overhaul plan Tuesday, saying it showed each American household would eventually gain about $600 a year if his proposal is implemented.

Calling his struggle with a reluctant Congress over the tax bill "a kind of drama," the president says bad guys and even a damsel in distress, Reagan asked members of his audience, "Do you find our present (tax) system utterly disgusting and demoralizing?"

"Yes," the crowd replied.

"Well, I'm with you," said the president.

"The heroes are the citizens across this country who are asking for tax justice," Reagan said. "The villains are the special interests — the 'I got mine' gang. And the damsel in distress?"

"A law named Endless Economic Growth who's tied to the tracks and struggling to break free."

Referring to the study in his speech at the McMinn County Courthouse in Athens, Reagan said his economic advisers told him the growth inspired by the tax changes "should create the equivalent of almost four million new full-time jobs. They found that the personal economic gain for each household will be about $600 a year."

"The truth is our plan will ultimately bring a heck of a lot more money into the government," Reagan said. "One reason is that every time we cut tax rates in one area — say on capital gains — we bring in more capital gains tax revenues because the cut in rates stimulates economic activity."

As Reagan began a two-stop visit to eastern Tennessee on his weekly trip out of Washington, he was asked for the tax bill, the White House issued a statement of the plan drawn up by the President's Council of Economic Advisors. It predicted the proposed overhaul of the federal income tax system ultimately could boost the gross national product by as much as 3.2 percent.

The council, whose forecasts of economic growth during the Reagan administration have proved over-optimistic in the past, acknowledged that its tax study projections "should be viewed as plausible outcomes rather than as precise predictions."

Proposed coal tax changes could have 'devastating effect'

By ED WRIGHT
Universe Staff Writer

President Reagan's proposed changes in the way the coal mining companies are taxed will have a devastating effect on the industry in Utah and the nation, according to Jack Christensen, president of the Utah Mining Association.

A published industry report indicates an increased tax burden on coal miners could result in cut production, driving up prices. It also said three would be an estimate of the cost of the tax.

Coal industry taxes would increase by about $180 million in 1986 and by more than $1 billion during the five-year phase-in of the program designed to begin next year, according to the report prepared for the National Coal Association.

Howard Wells, professor of Mine Engineering at the University of Utah, said even though the proposed changes would severely affect many mining operations, some Utah mines would not be affected because of the depressed state of the coal market.

"Coal Mining has been reduced to a marginal industry. Much of the difficulty to mine is the level of the economic difficulty to mine them," said Wells. "When you're losing money, you don't pay taxes."

"Overall, this tax program would be disastrous for the coal industry, disastrous for our energy policy and disastrous for coal-producing states like Pennsylvania," Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., told the Associated Press.

Specter, Chairman of the Senate Coal Caucus, also said the report leaves no doubt about the potential effect on the industry.

According to Wells, Reagan's tax change proposal would do away with the investment tax credit and the deduction for depletion allowance.

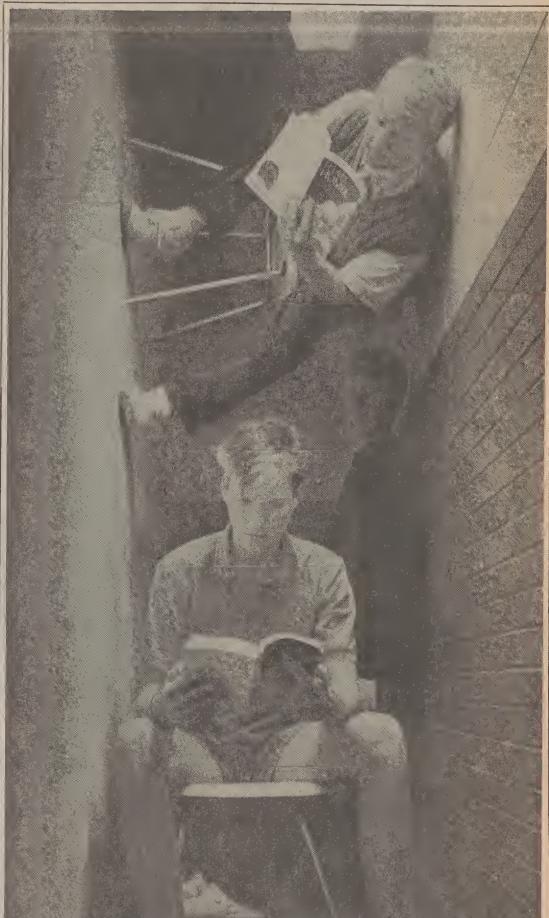

"The depletion allowance was a good idea but it is an iniquitous tax. It only benefits large, profitable mines. It is highly necessary for the industry, but it needs to be applied right, not done away with. It is one of the best tax deductions all mines could have," Wells said.

The report said the justification for the percentage depletion allowance was a strong one. "The deeper you go into the seam, the more it costs to produce a ton of coal," said Robert Stauffer of the Coal Association.

Wells said a mine gets its income from the sale of assets. Percentage depletion allows a mining operation to deduct the portion of its assets depleted, he said.

The report said the repeal of the investment tax credit would hit the coal industry hard because of its cash intensive nature.

Last year coal produced one-fourth of the total energy needs of the nation. While the industry has experienced growth in the last 30 years, growth in coal mining has slowed during the 1980s and unemployment among miners has risen as companies have worked to become more efficient in the shrinking market for their product.

Mountain accident first in 10 years

Orem officials have no intentions of discontinuing unified studies

DEBBIE HOWELL
Universe Staff Writer

Orem High School's unified studies program has been climbing mountain trails ten years and has never had an accident until Monday, when 17-year-old Cindy Witt fell to her death in Provo Canyon.

"We've never even had a broken finger," said vice-principal William Delaney. A group of 56 students and six supervisors were hiking on a frequently used trail when all of them except the accident victim, Witt, survived. "It's a miracle," said Cindy's mother, Diana Bittner, said Delaney. It is the same trail unified study groups have been using for the past ten years without any problems, he said.

Orem High School Principal Berdean

Jarman said Witt hit her head as she began to fall, knocking her unconscious and preventing her from grabbing hold of something to stop her fall.

Bitten fell down more rugged terrain, but was conscious, she was able to protect herself enough to survive the fall, he said.

Jarman said school officials will probably evaluate the unified studies program but have no intention of discontinuing the program. "I have not had a single negative phone call concerning the program, but I have had several calls from people concerned it might be discontinued."

The Alpine Unified School District liability insurance, and each student is required to have a liability waiver form signed by their parents before participating in such an activity, said Jarman.

Delaney said Orem high students were quiet, subdued and appeared shocked Tuesday because of the tragic accidents. "Everyone feels the loss," he said.

Delaney said unified studies is not a regular classroom situation, but combines English, physical education, and science into a three-hour daily program. "The group is like a family," he said. Several former unified study students called the school Tuesday to express their condolences and give support to the group's instructors, he said.

Funeral services for Witt have been scheduled for 10 a.m. Thursday at the Orem 32nd Ward Chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Walker Mortuary in Orem.

Pilot error, structural stress suspected in ultralight crash

DIANE RANCK BURHOE
Universe Staff Writer

Pilot error and excess structural stress was cited as a probable cause of death near the Provo Airport Monday of ultralight aircraft. The accident resulted in the death of two men.

The wife and children of one of the victims were watching helplessly as the aircraft crashed into a group of people.

Jim Mathis, airport manager, said the aircraft are flown for sport and do not require regulation.

"The ultralight crafts are not registered as aircraft," said Mathis. "They don't even require a pilot's license in order to fly them."

Mathis had left the airport for the evening a few hours before the accident took place.

The Unicom system, used to give advisories to air traffic, had also been shut off for the evening, Mathis said.

"I think it was pilot error," said Dave Rodriguez, president of Wasatch Wings. "He was doing some high stress maneuvers and I overheard him say, 'I'm not flying.' He just pushed the aircraft too much."

Mike Jones, certified air frame mechanic, said "Ultralights are mainly for level flying, not aerobatics."

The tested, manufactured crafts are "fairly safe," said Rodriguez. "The thing that makes them safe is the testing and who builds them, not the craft." Even the home-built aircraft are safe, and are made out of strong materials that exceed the strength of regular airplanes.

"Crashes are not too common. The last crash was about two years ago," he said.

Valtec is a supplier for state-of-the-art automatic control valves and engineering and manufacturing valves. These valves range from those used in the space shuttle refueling station at Vandenberg Air Force base in California, to milking machines on farms in Provo.

The valves range in size and cost from an 18 inch, 60 pound valve selling for $600, to one 22 feet high, weighing eight tons and selling for $10,000.

Depending on model and specifications, the Valtec valves can open and shut in a quarter of a second. They can withstand temperatures from 423 degrees below zero to 1700 degrees Fahrenheit, and pressures from vacuum to 25,000 pounds per square inch. Valtec employs 300 people, 30 of whom are engineers who come mostly from BYU and the University of Utah.

Valtec's multi-million dollar business crushed, falls in Europe, Middle East

KIRK MITCHELL
Universe Staff Writer

The strong dollar in foreign markets has crushed the European Middle Eastern business of a multi-million dollar company inngville.

altec, named the 1978 export company of the year by the Ad Trade Association, saw its international volume fall from 40 percent to 40 percent of total volume in fiscal year 1983-1984, to 1984-1985.

Foreign buyers are now going for less expensive models produced by foreign competitors," said Philip Skousen, manager of corporate communications for Valtec.

It's not necessarily the strong dollar that's affecting Valtec's business, but the weakness of the currency of foreign countries, whose high inflation rates have made their currency compared to the stable dollar, Skousen said. "The weakness of some of these nations allows them to buy their products on some of its foreign business. Valtec officials have raised the company's high-tech valves to European companies in return for royalties on them. The same valves, identical in pattern, are much less expensive to buy against the pound, which has fallen in three years from $2.40 to the £1.30, he said.

In Middle East, which has accounted for $4 million to $5 million in oil refinery and production business a year for Valtec,

'Star Wars' program wouldn't be foolproof

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense program would be effective in protecting America's safety under certain conditions, but it will never be able to protect the entire country from nuclear attack, science advisers to Congress concluded Tuesday.

A study by the Office of Technology Assessment said the United States would need "great technical success" in its research program along with a change in the Soviet Union's strategy to also emphasize defense rather than offense.

A companion OTA study raised new questions about U.S. anti-satellite, or ASAT, weapons and cautioned that while this country may lead now in a technology field related to Star Wars, the Soviets are likely to catch up.

"What this means is that after spending billions and billions of dollars, we could find that we have given ourselves greater instability than the world has ever experienced in the atomic age," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

The Strategic Defense Initiative (Star Wars) program "carries a risk" that it could start an entire new arms race and could create "severe instabilities" if it made the Soviets think the United States was prepared for a first-strike capability, the study suggested.

Some supporters of the program want a so-called "Astrodome" defense that would defend the entire nation, while others call for a defense of U.S. missile sites.

The study concluded that while anti-missile weapons could increase the safety margin in a nuclear attack, "assured survival of the U.S. population appears impossible to achieve if the Soviets are determined to deny it to us."

Soviet foreign official calls for 'Star Peace'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said the Reagan administration's Star Wars plan threatens a "nuclear catastrophe" and called instead for an international program of "Star Peace" in addressing the 40th U.N.

Y students counseled to live as prophet would have them

President Spencer W. Kimball, president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has had a greater effect on the church than any other man except Joseph Smith, said Elder Vaughn J. Featherstone at Tuesday's Devotional Assembly.

"President Spencer W. Kimball has given more energy, greater enthusiasm and hope to the church than any man in the restored church save the prophet Joseph Smith only," said Elder Featherstone, a member of the First Quorum of Seventy.

He said President Kimball is a great example of a servant-leader, because even though he has been in poor health, he continues to serve people in the best way he can and gives hope to people when all seems lost.

"He has set a work in motion that neither enemy nor foe will frustrate," Elder Featherstone said.

Avoid "theological pornography."

Referring to people who have left the church and are involved in writing anti-Mormon material, Elder Featherstone quoted Elder Boyd K. Packer, a member of the Council of Twelve, who said, "They leave the church but they can't leave it alone."

Elder Featherstone cautioned people who are weak in faith and have questions about the truthfulness of the restored gospel to not read anti-Mormon literature, which he called "theological pornography."

The general authority counseled students on a number of topics he thought President Kimball would have discussed, had he been able to attend.

He compared President Kimball's life to the last chapter of the book of Miseries, which is titled "The Last Chapter."

He said the president would counsel church members to choose videos and satellite stations carefully and keep the evil of R-rated and X-rated movies out of their homes.

"We are a peculiar people, and that is the strength of this church," he said.

Dress reflects values

Elder Featherstone said it is also important to General Assembly Tuesday.

Shevardnadze said the United States has "sinister plans" that would ignore an "uncontrollable and irreversible" global arms race. He said he had been instructed to make it clear that the Soviet leadership would respond to this challenge, whatever the cost.

It was Foreign Minister Shevardnadze's first speech at the United Nations since succeeding Andrei A. Gromyko earlier this year.

A Western ambassador, who did not want to be identified, said the speech was not a very good preparation for the upcoming Nov. 19-20 summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Russian administration officials had been hoping for indications in the Soviet minister's address that could help set the stage for a successful summit, but there was not much to encourage them.

Shevardnadze said the focus of the summit should be arms control.

Mexicans flee city, fearing disease

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Thousands fled the city Tuesday, fearing disease from polluted water and decaying bodies. Others watched rescuers pull survivors from earthquake debris that had imprisoned them for days, praying to see relatives.

Workers dug and listened on ultra-sound equipment, specially trained dogs sniffed and pawed in the desperate effort to find the estimated 1,500 people still buried, before it is too late.

Cheers are raised for every victory, when someone who thought his trap was his grave is pulled to safety.

Not even disaster can change fundamental human behavior. Teams digging through the rubble of an apartment building reached a 70-year-old woman who was rescued at first to comfort. "Because I'm not alone," people are going to think, "I have no shame."

The latest official count put the death toll at 3,000, from the two major earthquakes that struck the heart of the city last Thursday and Friday.

The city government said 7,100 people were injured and 600 remained in hospitals.

An estimated 300,000 are homeless, and only about half have found temporary shelter. The others huddle in parks and streets, or have left the city to seek help from friends and relatives outside the capital.

Health officials said there was no severe threat of epidemic from contaminated water and decaying bodies that either are caught in the rubble or awaiting burial.

Statue of Liberty: going, going, gone?

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — City officials battling the federal government over more than $940,000 in unpaid water bills for the Statue of Liberty say if they don't get satisfaction they'll try to foreclose and auction it off.

"God, it would be the greatest auction to see," Mayor Anthony Cucci said Monday.

But Cucci admitted, "We really do not want to sell the Statue of Liberty. What we do want is almost a million dollars. I'm going after it."

George Berkley, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of the Interior, which oversees the island through the National Park Service, rose to the defense of Lady Liberty, saying no entity can foreclose on federal property.

"We'd like to find the guy who buys the statue and see if we could sell him the Brooklyn Bridge," said Berkley.

The city has urged the Interior Department to take over the statue, which covers three years and is mostly the result of a leaking pipe. But a debt's a debt and officials must resort to more forceful action, said Thomas Folice, an attorney for the city.

Cheers are raised for every victory, when someone who thought his trap was his grave is pulled to safety.

FarmAid donations less than hoped for CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — The $50 million promoters hoped to reap from the FarmAid concert was far from realized Tuesday night, and some said that some viewers may have been offended that politics were injected into the benefit concert.

Others said contributions from Sunday's star-studded 14-hour show may have been reduced by public awareness that many farmers are well-off, or because attention was diverted by the earthquakes that shattered Mexico City.

The wide television audience Sunday pledged $8 million to $10 million, said concert publicist Victoria Rose.

She said corporate donations, mail contributions, and revenue from tickets, concessions, and a planned music video and album could "real easily" bring the total to the $50 million hoped for by concert organizer Willie Nelson.

However, a spokesman for the nation's largest farm organization said many farmers were disappointed that some of the entertainers publicly endorsed a farm bill by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, that proposes increased government price supports.

"It was the performers who got out of hand," said Mel Wooll of the American Farm Bureau Federation. "Willie blew it. It could have had a more positive impact if it hadn't been politicized."

But Tom Curi, president of the Illinois chapter of American Agriculture Movement, said, "I admire Willie Nelson and the others for having the guts to stand up for what they believe in and promoting this (Harkin's) farm bill."

Young policymakers replace old in China

PEKING (AP) — In a triumph for top-level Deng Xiaoping, the Communist Party promoted five younger policymakers to the ruling Politburo on Tuesday, replacing old revolutionaries with a new generation to guide China's reform.

But the scale of the transition was less than diplomats and Chinese sources forecast, and there was no replacement in the Politburo Standing Committee for Marshal Ye Jianying, who retired last week.

DT not just for young students; Elderhostelers visit Y campus

RACHEL COLLIER
University Staff Writer

To many young people, retirement may seem like the end of living, but for participants in BYU's Elderhostel program, it is the beginning of a whole new educational experience.

"BYU is a part of this nationwide program for senior citizens which involves 700 universities and 4,000 people," said Phillip Harris, college program manager for Continuing Education and the director of Elderhostels.

A group of Elderhostelers arrived on campus today, checking into Desert Towers for the week, armed with a meal ticket for the Morris Inn, like any other student.

The program name is a take-off from youth hosts in Europe. Marty Knowlton, the founder of Elderhostels, thought older people should have the opportunity to live at a university and learn," said Harris.

The concept is that once these people are educated, they want to see things, but not just as tourists—they want to go somewhere they can learn," said Harris.

BYU's genealogy classes are the most popular classes for participants.

Most of the participants are not members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and their backgrounds are a variety of educational and professional backgrounds.

Participants come from California, Colorado, Georgia, Kentucky, Oregon and Texas. They include former schoolteachers, librarians, college professors, insurance salesmen and merchants, their reason for being interested in genealogy as varied as their backgrounds. Pat Campbell, a retired government clerk from Pueblo, Colo., said, "I got the office from a Mormon bishop, I got the interest in it (genealogy)."

Instructors of this Elderhostel are Gordon and Carolyn Casper, who are teaching genealogical research for participants.

Medora Withers, an Elderhosteler from Hardinsburg, Ky., searches through the card catalog in the Harold B. Lee Library. The Elderhostel program is taking place at many universities nationwide.

seminar, and Dr. Norton, who is teaching a class on writing a personal memoir.

"I'm excited to work with these people," Norton said. "They're different from the regular classes I teach, because all of these people are here to learn."

"I really enjoy these trips," said Jane Nida, a retired librarian from Arlington, Va. "These people haven't vegetated. I think you'll find that these people are early retirees on purpose. They want to keep their minds active."

"The participants in Elderhostels have always been impressed with BYU, both the campus and the people," said Harris. This group is no exception."

tion.

I am really impressed with the school and the student body," said Ralph Fey, a retired mechanical engineer from Oxford, Ohio.

Hernie Mackey, a retired school teacher from Salem, Ore., agreed. "The kids invited us to sit and eat with them in the cafeteria and then join their group when they were talking downstairs in the dorms. They were just the sweetest kids," she said.

"All of our programs are always full to the maximum," said Harris. "We're going to expand our program this year and add more Elderhostels because of the success of our current programs."

'Quiet' Bellini a top receiver

By ERIC GOODELL

University Sports Writer

Sports Illustrated says he can catch spit in the wind, but Mark Bellini, BYU's wide receiver, insists he is actually a boring player.

"I'm not a flashy player. I'm quiet on the field," he said.

Bellini, a 6-foot, 180-pound junior, came to BYU just hoping to get some playing time by his senior year. The BYU staff quickly noticed him, and he was starting part way through his sophomore year.

Although he was all-conference on both offense and defense in high school, major colleges didn't give him much attention. In fact, only BYU and St. Mary's, a small college in California, were interested in his athletic ability.

To settle matters, "St. Mary's told me I was too small and too slow," said Bellini.

He was told he had been told he could walk on as a defensive back. That's the problem Bellini didn't want to play defense.

"In camp, the coaches told the receivers to go to the right and the defensive backs to go to the left. I went with the receivers," he said.

After making the team, Bellini found himself in Athens, Ga., for the second game of the 1982 season. He was the only freshman to make the trip.

"It all happened so fast that I didn't have time to think about it," he said.

After redshirting the '83 season, he caught 35 balls as a sophomore, including a 52-yard touchdown pass from Robbie Bosco in a 30-25 win over Air Force, coming when he was still getting adjusted to the offense. He leads BYU in receptions this year with 27 catches for 430 yards.

Bellini has had the opportunity to work with many good receivers while at BYU, and credits them, along with offensive coach Norm Chow, with much of his success.

"I try to be a conglomerate, picking up styles of other receivers plus adding a little of my own," he said.

Bellini concentrates on four basic areas of receiving: running pass patterns, speed, catching the ball and being smart on the field.

"I try to be a well-rounded player," he said.

Bellini doesn't play for the fun of it, but he says that football is a part of him.

"I play for the challenge of it. For the winning," he said.

Senior Glen Kozlowski has been getting most of the attention as a receiver, but Bellini doesn't mind. He will have next year to headline the Cougar aerial circus. Now that Kozlowski is injured and his playing status uncertain, Bellini said he is feeling added pressure.

Off the field, Bellini likes to get out to the mountains and fish. He has a pet box construtor that he sometimes lets ram around his living room.

"I've surprised a lot of people who walk in and see a snake crawling around," he said.

300th win eludes Niekro

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Niekro failed in his third bid last night to win his 300th game, and for the second time in a week, the home-run bats of the Detroit Tigers did him in.

Niekro, trying to become the 18th pitcher in major-league history to reach the 300-mark, left the New York Yankees' game in the fifth inning trailing 8-0 after Lance Parrish lined a two-run homer into the left-field seats.

Earlier, John Grubb had been Niekro's chief nemesis, getting two-run homers in the second and then delivering a two-run double in the third.

The rough outing came six days after Niekro took a 5-2 loss in Detroit after surrendering homers to Kirk Gibson, Darrell Evans and Larry Herndon. That defeat left Niekro with an 0-3 mark against the Tigers this season and prompted him to remark. "It looks like they've got my number."

Niekro won his 299th game on Sept. 8 against Oakland, but lost his first try at No. 300 on Sept. 13 when three unearned runs against Toronto saddled him with a 3-2 loss.

Trouble, though, struck in the second.

Parrish led off the second by grounding a single up the middle and Evans walked on a full-count pitch.

One later, Grubb hit the first pitch deep into the center-field bleachers.

Big loss to Spinks had to hurt Holmes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"That's the way it goes, guys," Larry Holmes said to a few visitors from the press. "You win some, you lose some."

There was no bitterness in his voice as he talked, in the quiet of a bedroom in his hotel suite, about his upset loss to Michael Spinks.

But it had to hurt.

Larry Holmes: 48-1. Rocky Marciano: 49-0.

He had talked about breaking the late Marciano's record, of becoming only the second heavyweight champion to retire unbroken.

He thought he had earned the decision over Spinks, the first light heavyweight champion to become a heavyweight champion Saturday night in Las Vegas.

But there was no rancor by him as he dressed to attend a postfight party.

"It was in the cards for me to lose," he said. Then, revealing that he has been seeing doctors about a pinched nerve in his neck, he said, "God always gives you a sign when to quit."

Spinks had been purged from him of defeat by Marciano's brother Peter.

"Rocky couldn't carry my jockstrap," Holmes had shouted. It was a thoughtless thing to say, the kind of thing that has earned him criticism in past fights.

He then went on to praise Marciano as a great champion. But that earlier statement hung in the air like a banner proclaiming Holmes an ungracious loser when what he was a proud fighter whose ego had been bruised.

Later, in his suite, when he was reminded of his outburst, he said, "Downstairs in the press conference, I got to relieve some pressure."

However, because of public outbursts such as that, some people will remember the 35-year-old Holmes as a poor imitation of Muhammad Ali.

Ali, the most courageous things to him, they now are considered just part of Ali's showmanship.

Holmes should be remembered as a champion, who took pride in being one who worked hard at honing his skills but couldn't keep them being eroded by age.

Some critics said he was getting fat of money and compliments. But Holmes, who learned his lessons from his sparring partner for Ali and Joe Frazier, fought almost all the great heavyweights of his generation — Ken Norton, Earnie Shavers, Mike Weaver, Gerry Cooney, Leon Spinks and Tim Weatherpoon.

Ali was far past his prime when Holmes was a model of agility, before and after the fight. At his peak, he was the possessor of a wonderful left jab that set up crisp combinations; a master at changing punching angles. He had a granite chin and poise under pressure in the ring.

Falcon, Ute gain conference honors

DENVER (AP) — Air Force quarterback Bart Weiss and Utah defensive back Clarence Fields were named the Western Athletic Conference's offensive and defensive players of the week.

Weiss, a 6-foot-2, 190-pound senior from Naples, Fla., rushed for 172 yards and six touchdowns in the Falcons' 39-17 victory over Rice. Weiss also had runs of 23, 28, 22 and 26 yards and completed five of seven passes for 97 yards.

Fields, a 5-10, 179-pound sophomore from San Diego, Calif., had seven unassisted and 13 assisted tackles. Utah defeated Washington State 44-37. Weiss set up Utah's winning touchdown.

Others nominated for the offensive award were San Diego State wide receiver Webster Slaughter, UTEP running back Nicky Combs, BYU wide receiver Mark Bellini, Hawaii running back Nuu Faaoia, Utah running back Eddie Lewis and Wyoming wide receiver Allyn Griffith.

Time to get ready for winter skiing

DENVER (AP) — Torn ligaments. Dislocated shoulders. Ah, skiing.

With the approach of ski season, a national organization for physical therapists released the results of a survey of 500 skiers over the last few years.

The group also recommended that those who intend to hit the slopes in six weeks or so start getting ready now.

Injuries occur most often in the lower extremities, according to the American Physical Therapy Association. Forty percent of all ski injuries involve knee injury, the group said. "Especially common" are injuries to the bones of the lower leg.

Next are the injuries caused by falls on outstretched arms.

"Gardener's thumb," officially a dislocated thumb, happens as a result of falling on an outstretched hand while holding on to a ski pole. A similar fall can result in partial or complete dislocation of the shoulder.

The survey also found that a quarter of all ski injuries come during the first or second run of the day or immediately after lunch. Bob Doctor, a private physical therapist in Denver, said such injuries may result from a lack of proper warm-up, especially stretching the muscles as one does before running.

Koz might play again

Glen Kozlowski's doctors said that here is a possibility that he can return and finish a "good part" of the season.

He underwent arthroscopic surgery for his left knee Sunday at University Medical Center in Salt Lake City.

He sustained the injury during the fourth quarter of the BYU-Temple game Saturday.

BYU hosts criterium

A bicycle criterium is scheduled to be in the parking lot west of the football stadium.

Registration is at 5 p.m. with the race beginning at 5:30.

A criterium is a race on an oval track where races compete against themselves and the clock to win. BYU's version will take place every Wednesday for the next six weeks. It is sponsored by the BYU ski team to help raise funds.

There are three classifications participants may enter: advanced, beginner (junior class) and non-racing.

Dr. R. Craig Poole, a professor in the physical education department, said he hopes the event helps spur more interest in bike racing.

"The University Singers" will be one of the four vocal groups to perform in the Choral Showcase, the first concert featured this season by the Music Department.

Choral groups share talent

By JEFF PARIS
University Staff Writer

What does one get when four talented choral groups, three directors and a wide selection of music are combined? An evening with BYU's Choral Showcase.

The Department of Music will present this annual vocal event Friday at 8 p.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC.

The program will feature BYU's four auditioned vocal groups, which include The Brigham Young University Singers, directed by Dr. Ronald Staheli; The Concert Choir and Men's Chorus, directed by Mack Wilberg; and the Women's Chorus, directed by Sandie Schmidt.

Staheli said this is generally one of the most popular vocal concerts of their season. "Traditionally, this is one of our favorite concerts for concert goers. It's always one of the best attended," he said.

The program gives those who attend an opportunity to "get to know" the different choral groups on campus and to see what the choral department will be doing during the upcoming season, said Wilberg.

He added that the concert is also good for the students. "We don't spend three months preparing a program. All of this is done after only three weeks of rehearsal. It really pushes the students to do well."

BYU's choral program boasts an impressive reputation. The University Singers recently returned from a tour of Russia, and the group performed at the National Choral Directors Association convention in April last spring and received impressive reviews.

Wilberg said the Y's reputation is continually improving. "The BYU Choral Program has gained national and international reputations."

One reason for the choral program's growth might be the directors' methods of teaching. Staheli and Wilberg both believe more than just musical learning can happen in a choral setting. "I think there are all types of growth that can take place in a choral group — not only musical. The learning is equalized in poise, self-reliance and real discipline. The students learn some great lessons," Staheli said.

Martha West, a senior from Provo, majoring in music, said, "It gives you confidence and helps you out in other ways too. I think all the mechanical engineering majors should be in choir."

West, a mechanical engineering major, was majoring in geography and also enjoyed his experience in the choral department. "All of us really love to sing and it helps to round out our educational experience," he said.

"It's a good release," said Jennifer Parker, a junior from Seattle, majoring in broadcasting. "It's really social and it keeps you busy," she added.

The students have a great deal of respect for their directors. Parker, speaking of Staheli, said, "He's always talking about singing from inside, from the heart. It's nice to work with professionals."

Hot line to Kremlin relays vital messages

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Like his predecessors, Ronald Reagan may not reveal his use of the private line to the Kremlin until he writes his memoirs. As of now, his White House will not discuss it. But according to one unconfirmed report, the Soviets activated it in 1983 to urge the United States to end its military attacks on Lebanon in response to Israeli attacks in Lebanon to Lebanon. Soviet "advisers" were manning Syrian positions just across the border.

The hot line symbolizes a different world. Off stage, public three yields to private caution. Here, leaders frequently reverse. Teddy Roosevelt's injunction about the conduct of foreign affairs: they speak loudly but carry a small stick. They bargain on a tip, too.

It was that way in the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, which began the hot line. John Kennedy wanted those Soviet missiles out of Cuba. In return, Nikita Khrushchev wanted a pledge of no invasion. Kennedy was forced to yield. Khrushchev then upped the ante. He wanted U.S. missiles out of Turkey. Well, now.

Those missiles were obsolete and were destined to be removed anyway. Kennedy told Khrushchev they would be out in a few months but not as a quid pro quo. Khrushchev was not to make this public. Agreed. Kennedy was not told he had given the United States should not seem to be trading away the weaponry of a NATO ally.

This took 13 tense days of point and counterpoint. Meanwhile, Kennedy ordered a blockade to stop more Soviet missiles from reaching Cuba.

Kennedy and Khrushchev had no direct private connection. Normal diplomatic channels were too slow and too official. So they used intermediaries who met secretly, sometimes at midnight in a bar or restaurant.

Both sides agreed this primitive, grade-B movie method would not do for the leaders of the most powerful nations on earth. On Aug. 30, 1963, they put the hot line in operation.

In its original form, the hot line was two teletype machines in Washington connected by telephone lines and cables through Helsinki and backed up by a radio circuit with a relay in Tangiers.

In 1978, the introduction of satellite communications made the system less vulnerable to accident or sabotage. Since then, the hot line has consisted of two satellite circuits and the original system, all still in the same tests and messages between leaders. The chances of all three failing at the same time are tiny.

It works this way: A message from the president goes from the White House by special electronic transmission, secure phone or by hand to a long, narrow room at the hushed and mysterious National Military Command Center in the Pentagon.

There, the officer in charge immediately orders the door locked and phones the White House to validate the message. Validated, it is then punched into a small brown machine which simultaneously encodes it and transmits it to two earth stations in Maryland and West Virginia and from there up to an American and Soviet satellite high above the earth, down to two Soviet earth stations in Moscow and L'vov and finally to the Kremlin. There a tape supplied by the Pentagon is run through a machine to decode the incoming message from the president. In their turn, the Soviets reverse the process to transmit to Washington.

Students perform with professionals

Stretching their breadth of experience, four BYU students will perform with Opera West in its presentation of "An Evening of Comic Operettas."

Three comic operettas, "Ihabod" based on The Legend of Sleep Hollow, "The Telephone," by Gian-Carlo Menotti, and Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury," will be presented Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 20-22 at Springville High auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

The students involved are Dennis Todd, Patti Prince, and John Boyack who will perform in "Trial by Jury" and M. Lisa Hansen, who will perform in "The Telephone."

Hansen, a theater major from Dallas, said the operettas are a good opportunity for her to use her talents. They also "help broaden my experience. As much experience as you can get is good. I find that these operettas are different from what I've done in the past."

For Todd, a junior from Santa Ana, Calif., majoring in voice, the operettas have also provided him with a good experience. "I'd like to have a combination career in performance and teaching. This will help."
